The compulsory military service proposition approved by the Cabinet provides for two years of active service and three in the reserves. Lots will be cast among the young men of is to 29 years for recruits. Each State will be asked to recruit one soldier for every 1,000 inhabitants, so that out of the 16,000,000 population it is estimated that the republic will be able to count upon 16,000 soldiers. In addition each State will have bodies of militia ready for active service at any time. Soldiers will be admitted into the army up to 40 years of age.
